Respectfully submitted,

O.C. Walker II
Executive Director
Tulsa Development Authority
Why are we pressing “pause” on the Sector Plan amendment, and who made the decision to do so?

The City of Tulsa, Councilor Vanessa Hall Harper, and Tulsa Development Authority jointly determined the current best course of action related to the Greenwood-Unity Heritage Neighborhood Plan is to press pause on the amendment. This decision means that the Tulsa Development Authority will not have the ability to exercise eminent domain powers within the plan boundaries. Pushing “pause” further allows an opportunity for residents and stakeholders to provide feedback on their vision for the neighborhood and surrounding area, and for staff to research national best practices around neighborhood redevelopment and revitalization efforts.

- A Sector Plan is the term the Tulsa Development Authority (TDA) utilizes for an Urban Renewal Plan. By state statute, certain information must be contained within a Sector or Urban Renewal Plan in order to provide the legal right for the use of eminent domain. These plans provide the guide for TDA’s work.

What does this mean for the Small Area Plan in place for the Greenwood-Unity Heritage neighborhood?

The approved 2016 Greenwood-Unity Heritage Neighborhood Plan is still an active plan, and it will continue to guide decisions by the Planning Commission and City Council on development and redevelopment within the plan area. Of 8 goals and 51 action items, 3 items related to land acquisition.

- A Small Area Plan is a plan created by the City of Tulsa to help guide development and redevelopment efforts within a defined area of the city. It speaks to the neighborhood’s desired land use and zoning, capital improvements, and programs. For the Greenwood-Unity Heritage area, the Small Area Plan and Sector Plan were combined into one single document.

What happens now?

The City of Tulsa and Tulsa Development Authority are undertaking two major projects that will help guide development and redevelopment decisions in the Greenwood-Unity Heritage neighborhood moving forward:

- A Downtown and Near Downtown Housing Study will kick off on Monday June 10th. This Housing Study will analyze current and future demand in key neighborhoods, and help the city determine how we can increase the development of high-quality, mixed-income communities and encourage affordable housing options.
- A Master Planning Effort for the Kirkpatrick Heights and Greenwood neighborhoods will be undertaken after July 1st. This master planning effort will provide residents, stakeholders, and others who are interested the opportunity to participate in the visioning process for the land immediately to the west of OSU-Tulsa and along Greenwood Avenue, which recently went back to the control of the Tulsa Development Authority.

How can I get engaged in the Downtown and Near Downtown Housing Study or the Kirkpatrick Heights/Greenwood Master Planning effort?

Residents and stakeholders will have the chance to participate in focus groups, online surveys, and open houses for both projects. The City of Tulsa and Tulsa Development Authority will engage all media sources to publicize engagement efforts, and will work with Councilor Hall-Harper to ensure residents are aware of multiple channels for input.

When will we hit “play” again on the Sector Plan amendment?

Once the City of Tulsa has completed the Master Plan for the Kirkpatrick Heights and Greenwood neighborhoods, we will relaunch the Citizen Advisory Team (CAT) to consider an amendment to the Sector Plan and to present appropriate policies related to the use of eminent domain. We expect that this will happen in Spring of 2020.
